How It Works:

Background

Sharps include any contaminated sharp instrument used in the medical industry, such as: needles, syringes, scalpels, lancets, orthodontic wires, blood-tainted knife blades, contaminated broken glassware and glass slides.

Why properly manage sharps

The majority of medical waste generated in the U.S. is regulated at the state and local level. State regulations generally cover potentially infectious medical waste, sometimes referred to as regulated medical waste. Sharps are a category of regulated medical waste. Sharps are also regulated under OSHA's Blood-borne pathogens standard.

Improper management of discarded needles and other sharps can pose a health risk to the public and waste workers. Improperly discarded needles may expose waste workers to potential needle stick injuries and potential infection. Janitors and housekeepers also risk injury if loose sharps poke through plastic garbage bags. Used needles can transmit serious diseases, such as HIV and hepatitis.

Mail-back sharps disposal is one of the EPA recommendations for disposal.
